Part 1

English is the language of business

Ivan is a 25-year-old Russian man from Moscow. He has a wife and 2 children. He is an engineer and he works at a big multinational company. Although Ivan's mother tongue is Russian, he has to speak English because his boss often sends him to America. And this is not the only multinational company which sends people abroad. In many workplaces English is a must. English has become the language of business all over the world, however there are many other languages which many people speak. There's German, French, Spanish, and, of course, there's Ivan's mother tongue, Russian. But no matter that Russian is so widespread, with over 200 million speakers, Ivan still has to speak English. So why is it English? England is not such a big country at all, even though there are relatively many people living in it. Anyway English is not only the national language in England, but also a in such big countries as Australia, Canada and the United States of America. Besides, and this is even more important, English has become a second language in many places. Not only in Ireland and India, which were British colonies, but also in Western Europe. Children in Holland, Belgium and Sweden, for example, learn English at school from about the age of five. And they do not only learn English at school. Many TV-programmes come in English only, and without a subtitle. So for the younger generation in the West, speaking English is quite natural. And that's why Ivan has to keep on studying the language.

Part 2

A banker's daily programme

Psychologist: So Ms Durham... What did you say your job was?

Banker: I am a banker in New York City.

P: A real Wall Street banker! That is interesting. It must pay very well, mustn't it?

B: My salary is not bad, true. But my life is a chaos. That's why I visited you. My life is a chaos and I need help.

P: I will try to help you. Do you think your life is stressful? Could you describe one of your working days to me? A normal day.

B: Sure. I get up at half past four.

P: So early? Can't you sleep?

B: No, not really. When I get out of bed at five I usually switch on the computer and I read my mail and the news.

P: That's why you have those red eyes. What do you do next?

B: I drink my coffee and watch the news again on TV at six. Then I go back to my computer and I write comments on Facebook. At seven I leave for work. I get to work earlier than everybody else. Before the traffic jam starts. Then I start to work at about eight. There is much to do. At four, when I go home, I feel this strange stress. Sometimes when I hear the cars, I cry.

P: Were you born in New York?

B: No, in a small village in Alabama. I came to study to New York when I was fourteen. I attended both high school and university here in New York. I've lived here for twenty years. And unfortunately, I've always lived in noisy neighbourhoods. My parents came to live here too. They live in New Jersey. I visit them every second weekend.

P: Aha, so your life suddenly became much more stressful when you came to live in the city. This must be a part of your problem. Next time we will continue to talk about it.

Part 3

A travelling businessman

Interviewer: Good morning Sir. I'd like to ask you a few questions if I may.

Jack: Well, I'm waiting to catch my flight so I guess I can answer a few questions.

I: Thank you, Sir. First of all, how often do you travel?

J: I travel about twice a month. My record is five times a month. But that doesn't happen very often, only if I see really big business around.

I: And where are you flying to on this trip?

J: I'm flying to Austin, Texas. I have to visit an oil company. If I'm lucky I'll be able to buy it. Wish me luck!

I: ...ok, and where did you fly on your last trip?

J: I flew to Portland, Oregon. I've already been there three times!

I: Really! Do you enjoy travelling for business?

J: Yes, although I prefer staying in the office. I don't really like crowded airports and waiting for hours. I don't like when they make me open my suitcase either. Not at all.

I: And what do you like most about travelling?

J: I like visiting new cities and trying out new food. I always have my camera with me and I take many pictures. There are albums full of photos on my computer and I upload the best ones on an Internet site on my blog. People usually comment on them and it seems they like my photography.

I: Oh, I see. Is there anywhere you would like to visit that you haven't visited yet?

J: Yes, I'd like to go to Hawaii! I love going to the beach! But unfortunately I don't have time for holidays at all. Travelling for business takes up all my time. It's a great pity if you have to work all year. That's what I do.

I: OK. Thank you very much for your time today.

J: You're welcome. My pleasure.
